

WARREN A. PATRICK EXTENDS ACTIVITIES

Chicago Manager of "The Billboard" Is Now Acting in Similar Capacity for New Trade Journal "Signs of the Times."

Warren A. Patrick, resident manager for Chicago of "The Billboard," a bright and breezy magazine devoted to the theatres, circuses, fairs, and musical enterprises, which comes to the Gazette's desk each week, has recently been placed in charge of the same field for "Signs of the Times," a monthly magazine devoted to the interests of sign-makers, carvers, and painters, which is issued by the same Cincinnati publishing house, which has made a success for "The Billboard." The October number of this copiously illustrated trade journal contains a large cut of Mr. Patrick and remarks by the management to the effect that "he is distinctly an acquisition, combining the persuasiveness of Hermes with the ability and enthusiasm of one who is familiar with every phase of the profession in which he is engaged (advertising) and content of those superior merits which his own comprehensive and continuous observations have discovered for him in his commodity (publicity). Not merely a salesman of advertising space, not an editorial or regular exponent of those superlative excellent qualities that recommend outdoor advertising to the sign of circumspect dealer in the ways that require publicity, Mr. Patrick is a gentleman of dignity whose success in the field where he stands at the very head of his contemporaries has depended largely on his abiding integrity and steadfast principle." Friends of the former Janesville young man will rejoice in this new evidence of his ability and the business world's appreciation of the same. His office is at 87 South Clark street.

RED CEDAR LAKE IS FAST BECOMING POPULAR RESORT

Alva Russell, Who Has Returned from Annual Outing, Says That Land Valuations Are Increasing.

Alva Russell has returned from his annual outing at Red Cedar Lake. This body of water is fast becoming one of the popular resorts of the border state and shore land which could have been purchased for a song when Mr. Russell first became interested there is now held at fancy prices. Dr. W. H. Palmer, W. P. Sayles, and W. E. Evenson are the other local people who have purchased property there.

TAUGHT DANCING HERE IN THE PIONEER DAYS

Collamer G. Severance, Who Died in Milwaukee Thursday, Was Also a Band Organizer of Note.

Collamer G. Severance, veteran dancing-master who taught the poetry of motion in Janesville years ago, died at his home in Milwaukee Thursday night. He was seventy years of age and came to Wisconsin from Vermont in 1837. Until very recently he conducted the Severance dancing academy in the state metropolis. With his brother, A. B. Severance, who died several years ago, he had a prominent part in the music of Wisconsin during the early days. They organized the Severance & Williams band which played for the first inaugural ball in Madison and for fifteen years thereafter furnished music for the social affairs at the state capital. "The deceased is survived by his widow, two sons—C. B. and O. H. Severance—and an adopted daughter, Mrs. C. J. Steele.

Three thousand bales of cotton which arrived at Bremen from Savannah Oct. 8, were destroyed by fire.

receiving the benefits of the present republican administration he gave an interesting summary of the Cuban trouble as follows:

"When we went to war with Spain we took a departure from our traditional policy. We set a precedent in international dealing. We appealed to arms by the command of the conscience of the people of the United States. We were not actuated by any Napoleonic lust of territory. We were inspired by a broad, generous, American spirit of humanity. There was no lurking purpose to draw the sword in the professed interest of our distressed neighbors and stain it by wresting from them their land and their homes.

"We wrote our exalted purpose in the resolution declaring war. We wrote it there that the world might read. We wrote what we did because it was expressive of the dominant thought of the American people. The people were resolved to free Cuba; not to possess her. To liberate her and not force her to abandon her struggle for liberty.

"The republican-national committee which met at St. Louis, composed of earnest, patriotic men, gave expression to the national desire in the following words:

"From the hour of achieving their own independence, the people of the United States have regarded with sympathy the struggles of other American peoples to free themselves from European domination. We watch with deep and abiding interest the heroic battle of the Cuban patriots against cruelty and oppression. And our best hopes go out for the full success of their determined contest for liberty. The government of Spain, having lost control of Cuba, and being unable to protect the property or lives of resident American citizens, or to comply with its treaty obligations, we believe that the government of the United States should actively use its influence and good offices to restore peace and give independence to the island.

"This utterance was worthy of the men who so heartily commended William McKinley to the favor of the American people. When the hour for supreme action came to congress, it wrote into the declaration of war—the most solemn act which engaged the consideration of men—the sublime letter and spirit of the resolution of the convention which inspired the heart of every patriotic American. It was a high resolve, never before reached by any nation in all Christendom.

"The honor of the American flag is dearer to us than the expansion of our domain by force of arms. Our fleets and our armies are invincible, but shame upon a government which would measure its honor by its power. The majesty of the American people does not rest in the strength of their armies and their fleets, but in their sense of justice towards the weak. To minister unto the needy, to broaden the object of free American civility. It is a great thing to have power, but it is a greater thing to use it in a great way. It was a great thing for America to assemble her armies and fleets and to give freedom to Cuba. No government in the world ever did a greater thing—greater in its moral sublimity. If we had waited when, but a few short years ago, after the flag of the United States had been raised in honor above 'Moro Castle' and after it had accomplished its benevolent mission, it was lowered by American hands and the Cuban flag was raised in its place. The world applauded and every American wished Cuba god-speed. We proudly stood at the birth of a new flag among the nations of the earth. The Cuban republic was in the best sense the child of the great republic. It was indeed a proud moment in American history.

"We went to war in the name of humanity and no higher summons ever called men to arms. If we had crowned our victory by taking over the island, the world would have given us no credit for a noble act, and history would have written us down, and rightfully, as having despoiled weak neighbors of their land and their liberty, which were theirs by the same considerations which our fathers wrote in the immortal Declaration of Independence.

"We could, of course, have made war upon Spain and compelled peace in Cuba, and then have seized the island as a prize of war. Such a course would have been sanctioned by precedent set in lands beyond the sea. No power could have stood against us. But we would have violated the very principles which have made us great. We would have violated that American sense of fair play, which is dearer to us than principles and power.

"When we gave Cuba her freedom, we gained in an unusual degree the esteem of the world, and increased the measure of our self-respect. We exhibited a measure of self-restraint and magnanimity which was so rare among nations that the world was not prepared to see it, and many among ourselves were surprised that we possessed it. The American people have always felt that if Cuba was ever to become a part of the great republic it must be under circumstances which are entirely free from doubt or suspicion. It must be under such conditions as to leave no just grounds of national reproach. It must be through the orderly operation of the natural law of mutual interest and mutual respect, free from any taint or suggestion of physical force or moral coercion. We would not weaken Cuba's power to maintain her sovereignty by any suggestion of a doubt as to her capacity for self-government. Cuba, in good time, may become a part of the United States. If, in God's providence, she does, it will be when the American people are satisfied that American honor, imperatively commands it.

"President Roosevelt is worthy of all praise for his assurance to Cuba that the United States will adhere to the generous course which originally inspired her intervention. We have in all of this a guaranty that Cuba shall have her fair chance.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING IN MADISON

Mrs. George G. Sutherland and Mrs. A. A. Jackson Attended Session at Madison This Week.

Mrs. George G. Sutherland and Mrs. A. A. Jackson attended the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Woman's Synodical Missionary society in Madison this week. Mrs. V. P. Boggs of Pittsburg gave an address on the work among the freedmen of the United States and Mrs. Ella A. Boole of New York, field secretary of home missions, was another of the speakers. The report on mission work in Wisconsin was given by Mrs. T. E. Balding and two of the home missionaries, Rev. James S. Wilson and Miss Clara N. Austin, were heard on the subject. "New Forces in China" was the subject of an address on foreign missions by Mrs. W. O. Carrier.

"Told in the Hills."

The scenery, costumes and other details of "Told in the Hills," the stirring drama of western life in which Edwin Arden appears at the Myers Theatre Wednesday, Oct. 17, were prepared from photographs supplied by the author of the novel, Marah Ellis Ryan, who also dramatized her own popular book. The photographs were taken by Mrs. Ryan during her long sojourn in the Kootenai hills and the Chinook forests in Montana and Idaho, where the scenes of the drama are

EDWIN ARDEN OF "TOLD IN THE HILLS," HERE OCT. 17. These pictures not only gave the scene painters an exact idea of the topography of the country, but they supplied the costumes with every detail of the dress adopted by the cowboys, scouts and Indians. "Told in the Hills" comes here with the same strong cast and original production seen during the last summer run of the play in Chicago. Edwin Arden, the star, is justly considered one of the finest of our romantic actors, and his impersonation of General Jack, scout and cowboy, is said to be one of his most artistic creations. The story deals with his efforts to avert an Indian uprising, and at the same time save the girl he loves, Rachel Hardy, an eastern girl visiting on a Montana ranch when there is a threatened uprising of the Kootenai and the Blackfeet.

The New York Dramatic News of October 6th has the following: "Cecil DeMille in a new role—A company under the management of Margaret H. Brown will revive some of the old standard operas. The company is going out under the name of the Standard Opera Company, and will play the middle west. This season the Bostonian Girl and Martha will be presented and Cecil DeMille has been engaged to stage these productions and play the comedy roles. The operas are to be put on not only with great musical intelligence, but under Mr. DeMille's direction they are to have a dramatic setting which has not been equalled in this class of productions for a long time. Mr. DeMille appears in this city with the Standard Opera Company Monday and Tuesday evenings, October 22 and 23, at the Myers theatre.

The Winninger Company. In the Amusement profession, as in all other vocations originality takes precedence in the race for supremacy and success. The imitator is always outdistanced above competition occupying a place by itself. Winninger Bros. Own Co. has elevated popular price amusement to the plane of the higher price attraction, and is recognized as the best in their line. Winninger Bros. have never experienced a losing season, violated a financial obligation or in any way imposed upon their patrons the amusement-loving public. This record speaks for itself and is a lasting guarantee. In organizing their attraction this season, no expense has been spared and have outdistanced all would-be competitors. A line of plays never before presented at popular prices, and equal to some of the best "one night" stands competent players in every part, a clever line of vaudeville between the acts and a band and Orchestra are carried. A pleasant surprise, a welcome visitor and favorite wherever he is the universal verdict of press and public throughout the territory played by this Company. The one big show at popular prices, 10, 20 and 30c. At Myers Theatre, all next week except Wednesday, commencing Monday, October 15

Man Given All the Credit

Heart Weakness

The action of the heart depends upon the heart nerves and muscles. When from any cause they become weak or exhausted, and fail to furnish sufficient power, the heart flutters, palpitates, skips beats; and in its effort to keep up its work, causes pain and distress, such as smothering spells, short breath, fainting, pain around heart, arm and shoulders. The circulation is impeded, and the entire system suffers from lack of nourishment.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure makes a heart strong and vigorous by strengthening these nerves and muscles.

"I had palpitation and pain around my heart, and the doctors said it was incurable. I don't believe it now, for after taking six bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, three bottles of the Nerve and Liver Pills I am entirely cured, and feel better than I have for five years, and it is all due to these remedies. I want you to know that your medicines cured me. It relieved me from the first dose, and I kept right on till the pain in my chest was gone, and I kept on feeling better even after I quit taking it." JOHN E. STUBBS, Belding, Mich.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

Do You Believe in Signs?

To dream of catching fish is a sign of making good bargain.

All may be shoes that come to your hook, but to judge a "bargain" when you've caught it, apply a better test than price. That's only the bait. What the shoe is—what comfort it gives and how long it will last—is the real test of value. Crossetts could not sell for less, nor be better shoes though they sold for more.

RISE IN BREAST

And many other painful and serious ailments from which most mothers suffer, can be avoided by the use of "Mother's Friend." This great remedy is a God-send to women, carrying them through their most critical ordeal with safety and no pain. No woman who uses "Mother's Friend" need fear the suffering and danger incident to birth; for it robs the ordeal of its horror and insures safety to life of mother and child, and leaves her in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery. The child is also healthy, strong and good natured. Our book "Motherhood," is worth its weight in gold to every woman, and will be sent free in plain envelope by addressing application to Bradfield Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

The country at large and the state of Wisconsin in particular has too many churches. This plain statement of a cold fact may shock some good people, and yet the truth contained in it is so apparent that a little investigation will satisfy the most skeptical.

One of the Methodist church papers of recent date in speaking of a western conference said that out of 150 pastors represented 115 of them were working for salaries of $700 or less, and many of the number for $500.

Nothing was said about other denominations in the same localities where these pastors were trying to eke out an existence, but it is safe to assume that they were noted for weak and struggling churches.

A young man in attendance at the conference recently held in Janesville was sent back to serve his little church another year. In speaking of his aspirations he said: "I might have done better, but there is a little weak Baptist church in my town that is on the verge of collapse and I know the people so well that many of them will come to us when their organization expires."

That was perhaps a laudable ambition, for one Protestant church in that kind of a town is all it can support and it matters but little what denomination controls it.

The Rev. R. M. Vaughan of this city sized up the situation intelligently and correctly in a plea made before the Baptist state convention at Evansville for the "correlation of Christian forces." His address was published in last Thursday's daily and is well worth reading by all church people.

Mr. Vaughan believes that the cause of evangelical Christianity would be greatly strengthened and advanced could the weak churches in country towns and districts throughout the state unite their forces and work together.

The picture which he paints from real life of weak and struggling churches with only a handful of members is made more pathetic by the statement that "there is scarcely a town in our state, without a church of our order, in whose cemetery a Baptist church has not found ignominious repose. Of 197 English-speaking churches but 68 are self supporting. In one of our associations every church has fallen below the level of self support."

The history of the Baptist church is being repeated by every other evangelical denomination. Twenty years ago a number of bright young preachers left the Wisconsin Methodist conference and took up work in other churches or more congenial fields.

One of them said, when asked why he did not remain: "There is no future for a young man in Wisconsin Methodism, for like many other denominations it will be weaker twenty years from now than it is today."

That his prophetic vision was correct is evidenced by the following statement made before the West Wisconsin conference by a presiding elder not long ago:

growing report that will produce a good feeling in the meeting from a district in which so many charges seem to be struggling with the inevitable. The German invasion continues. We have commodious churches in country places where a few years ago large congregations assembled, when pastors' salaries were easily paid, and there was a pride in the good record for benevolences. In many of these churches congregations have dwindled to a few.

The statistics offered by Mr. Vaughan are interesting and instructive. He cites the fact that out of a population of 2,200,000 nearly half is about equally divided between the Catholics and Lutherans, while the other denominations are represented by less than 150,000.

The population is largely foreign and the religion of the fathers is represented in the two strong denominations in control. This fact speaks well for the people, but it is a stubborn fact which is frequently overlooked or ignored.

There is just now building in the city of Watertown, one of the German strongholds of the state, a Methodist church building. The little weak society which has it in hand has had a precarious existence of years, but the enthusiastic young pastor imagines that in some miraculous way the new church will fill up and be supported by recruits from the Lutherans and Catholics.

The young man has as much to learn along this line as the Rev. Dr. Eaton, who aspires to be governor on the prohibition ticket. The doctor urges his brother ministers to work and vote for him. If he could gain the support of all the Methodists in the state it would represent less than 10,000 votes, and he must know that less than one-tenth of this number will vote the prohibition ticket.

There are some facts connected with environment that are worth recognizing and Wisconsin presents an object lesson which can be studied to advantage and profit.

The state is one of the best in the union, from either a business, moral or religious standpoint. It combines with hard common sense the jewel of common honesty. The people as a class are neither emotional, fanatical nor hypocritical.

They are law-respecting and law-abiding people. Half the population is connected with two strong church organizations and the loyalty, possessed for their religion is the result of inheritance and education. The confirmation of a child means his dedication to the church, not for a day, but for life, and the faithfulness with which these vows are kept is the strength of both the Catholic and Lutheran churches.

It is fortunate for the state, with its mixed population, that the church exerts so strong and helpful an influence, and while the limited field not covered may be barren for other denominations there is no cause for anxiety on that account.

The intelligent and sensible thing to do is to recognize conditions and make the best of them.

Mr. Vaughan makes a strong plea for the union of weak churches in the country districts and smaller towns. It will be said that he is in advance of his age and generation, but he is sound on the proposition, and if "evangelical Christianity" is to keep pace with the growth of the state it will be by the union of forces and the sacrificing of creeds which in themselves are non-essential.

STAND BY THE LOYAL MEN

The taxpayers owe it to themselves and to the six aldermen who are trying to help the city to stand by these men with the best moral support that can possibly be furnished.

Every influence will be brought to bear by the opposition, which is both obstinate and determined.

The sentiment expressed by a large majority of the taxpayers in the first ward is the prevailing sentiment throughout the city. The people want the interurban road and the six men who represent public sentiment on this question in the council are entitled to the most hearty support.

There's no time like the present to do things. Janesville now has an opportunity to secure a railroad for the asking. If the proposition is turned down the town will wait a long time for another chance. It requires nerve, as well as money, to invest $100,000 in the local line, which at its best has never paid expenses and interest.

It is now estimated that the primary election cost one dollar per capita for every voter in the state and still McGovern is not satisfied. The law is a burlesque and unless amended will result in the organization of the worst machine in the country. Only well-to-do office-seekers will be in line for office.

MOANED FOR HELP: WOODEN LEG BROKEN

Gus Baker and Al Hilt Called to Assist Employee on the Washout Filling Gang.

As Gus Baker and Al Hilt were on their way home Wednesday evening they heard cries of help coming from near the scene of the wash-out on Washington street. On starting an investigation a deep basso said, "Can't you help a man with a broken leg?" He was lying in the gutter but seemed in no pain. Then the rescuers looked closer and found the sufferer held the broken member in his arms. He said he was on his journey to camp after spending the evening down town and fell through a wooden sidewalk breaking his wooden leg. Mr. Baker and Hilt assisted the man to his lodging tent. He was employed by Contractor McGavock of Deloit who has been assisting P. W. Ryan in filling up the washout hole.

OSTRICH FARM WAS AFIRE DURING DAY

Houses on Western Avenue Were in Danger and Department Was Called.

By a still alarm at half-past eleven o'clock this morning the fire department was called to Western avenue to protect the houses on the street from fire which raged all this morning and through the afternoon on the marsh between that highway and the river. It is not known how the blaze started, but it spread over nearly the entire strip of land known as the "Ostrich farm" and "encompassed" or "invaded" premises. Homes were threatened and the fire department laid fifteen hundred feet of hose to use in case the flames spread. Some of the firemen are still there on guard.

Before a large number of relatives and friends, Miss Pauline Cross of this city and Arthur Owen Gates of Pacific Grove, California, will take nuptial vows tomorrow. The marriage ceremony will be performed by Rev. J. H. Tippet at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Georgiana Cross, 65 South Main street, at two o'clock. The young people will be unattended and after congratulations will depart for the coast. They will go to house-keeping immediately at Pacific Grove, where the groom is engaged in banking. He is a most successful young business man and the son of A. O. Gates, the banker at Milton Junction. The bride is a well known and highly respected young lady and prominent in the work of the Central Methodist church. Her many friends here will extend congratulations. Among those from out of the city that will witness the ceremony are the father and mother of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Kidder, Miss Cora Kidder, Ray Kidder, Miss Mamie Paul, Mr. and Mrs. William Paul and children and Wallace Paul and family, all of Milton Junction.

FOR RESTORATION OF ST. LAWRENCE PLACE

Residents of the Avenue Whose Nomenclature Was Degraded, by Council Will Make a Demand.

At the meeting of the common council Monday evening residents of First street will enter a vigorous protest against the action of the City Fathers in restoring that plebeian name upon the beautiful thoroughfare that was St. Lawrence Place, without even consulting their wishes. While the legality of the council's action is questioned, the petitioners hope to recover the name without resorting to the courts. The attention of the aldermen will be directed to the fact that the designation "St. Lawrence Place" was officially conferred upon the section of the thoroughfare in question, in 1892, and that it is manifest injustice to make confusion and trouble for the property-holders now by changing the title. It is understood that the residents of Court street are also clamoring to have their name "Park Place" restored and will be heard from at the meeting.

EAGO FLOUR..

It's easy to see its superiority.

It's easy to see why we are so much in earnest about it.

Just one test, one trial, a batch of biscuits, bread, a cake or pie and you understand it all.

It MUST be tried. If you would thoroughly appreciate its many points of excellence.

We have good, sound, substantial reasons for making such strong claims for it.

It takes more wheat to make a barrel of this flour than any other, because it is more highly milled. It is sifted and sifted till only the very finest part of the wheat is left, the rest is discarded and sold as low grade.

This is why a sack of EAGO costs more; this is why it makes more bread (reducing the cost of the BREAD) less than that made from cheaper flours. This is why the bread is sweeter, whiter and finer grained.

Doesn't it seem that it would pay to use such flour as this?

quarters of the city in violation of the city ordinance which provides a heavy fine for this offense. Mr. Bowen appeared in municipal court this afternoon in company with Attorney George Sutherland and stated that he had made some inquiries of city officials before putting the placards up and had been given to understand that there was no prohibitory measure in force. He agreed to remove all of them by Wednesday next and the warrant will be held in abeyance until that time. The attention of the city attorney was called to the fact that certain bills with Y. M. C. PARKER BUYS OLD DILLENBECK FARM

Janesville Pen Manufacturer Purchased Hundred and Fourteen Acres in Town of Harmony.

At one hundred and twenty-five dollars per acre George S. Parker of the Parker Pen company has contracted for the hundred-and-fourteen-acre farm of Ezra Dillenbeck in the town of Harmony. The property lies about two miles out of the city on the Milton Junction road. In 1854 it was purchased by Mr. Dillenbeck at twenty dollars an acre, the land being transferred from the original holder, the man who secured it from the government. Mr. Parker will take possession of the farm in the spring.

The Gazette says: "The Rock County National has a vault the door of which is of crystallized iron, three thicknesses, with Covert's combination lock; a burglar proof safe, the walls of which are composed of chilled iron two inches thick, and fastened with combination lock, and a chest made of seven thicknesses of hardened steel, and this also fastened with combination lock. Probably no bank in the west has securities which excel even if they equal these. We think burglars would rue the day they attempted a raid on either of our banks."

We have kept up with the procession and today our twin steel vaults are one for our own use, and one for safety deposit purposes, are excelled by none.

What Is Doing In The Sporting World

Advice For Football Players

Reminder of Simple but Important Features That Are Often Neglected.

The Long Pass, Kicking and the Method of Catching the Ball.

Many football players are deficient in knowledge of some of the important elementary features of the game, strange to say. The reason is this: Thinking that only the most intricate phases and questions are worthy of more than fleeting attention, they foolishly neglect things that should be well known and at the command of the mere tyro.

For those overconfident players and also for the beginners I will describe three rudimentary features in detail.

FIG. 1.—CORRECT WAY TO MAKE AN ACCURATE KICK.

They are the long pass, the short, accurate kick and the manner of catching a kicked ball.

First as to the kick, shown in Fig. 1. The ball should be met by the foot at least three feet from the ground, because otherwise it might be blocked by an opponent.

The outstretched instep should hit the ball square, under between the middle of the ball and the end. This gives the ball a forward spin when it hits the ground, and the ball can be sent on a low flight.

Note that the ball is caught below the chest, to one side, and is held by one forearm and the two hands, with the fingers widely spread. This is the ideal catch, but, of course, one cannot always be judged to land just right.

An invariable rule, however, is to catch the ball against the body and with one forearm and two hands. Always get your hands on the ball, and do not try, as some duffers do, to catch the ball with your arms. It is generally well to have one hand below the ball, to keep it from slipping through the pocket you make for it. Keep account of your misses in practice and note your improvement.

As to the long pass: The point of the ball is held in the palm of the hand, with the fingers spread around it. The ball should be made to sail flat in the air. In passing a ball while on the run it should be thrown almost always with both hands, very much as a basket ball player throws and passes.

Nutboy, 2:07½ Leads In Winnings

The Once Erratic Trotter Rises to National Fame.

He Passed Through Many Hands—His Career a Varied One.

The biggest money winning trotter of the year, is the once, erratic Nutboy, 2:07½, he that clipped a quarter of a second from his previous record at Syracuse recently. This remarkable horse has passed through many vicissitudes. He first saw the light of day at John H. Shults' stock farm, Long Island, N. Y. From the first he was wild and ungovernable. Foaled in 1896, he was sold as a four-year-old under the name of Bengaline to Dr. Spaulding of Decatur, Ill. There he distinguished himself as a runaway, and the genial doctor to stop him would steer him against a load of hay or a board fence. From Spaulding he passed to a man named Bates of Richmond, Va., but quickly found the sales ring in New York.

This was in December, 1903. By this time he had shown a half in 1:07 and a quarter in 0:33. His breeder, John H. Shults, purchased him at a sale, supposing he was buying a mare. Finding his mistake, he ordered him resold, and he became the property of Paul Connelly of Philadelphia. After running away and nearly killing his driver he was bought by Thomas Young of Philadelphia. He decided to fatten him, cut off his tail and sell him for a high stepper. He put him in a quiet place and stuffed him with hay and oats, but he worried his flesh off as fast as it was put on. After a month's trial Young became discouraged, and away he went again to the auction block. William McFarland got him and put him in the hands of a trainer. He was so unmanageable that his trainer threw up his hands and retired. To the auction block again he posted, and as Nutboy (probably because he was so hard to crack) he passed to Henry Cressdale of Avondale, Pa.

At Avondale he quieted down and showed some speed. Cressdale did not want a race horse, and sold him to George Hindermeyer of Philadelphia. He took him to Belmont park, Pennsylvania, and introduced him to State

NUTBOY, 2:07½, LEADING TROTTER WINNER OF YEAR.

Clark, driver and trainer of Kinstress. State drove him a first quarter in 0:34½ and a second in 0:32½ and offered $1,000 for him. Hindermeyer would identify him. The horse was now nine years old, and his owner could not go back farther than four years. C. N. Payne of the Point Breeze track now took a shy at him. The son of Nutpine ran away with him three times, getting entirely out of the harness once.

One day in the fall of 1905 an angel came to Hindermeyer and whispered in his ear. "Lo, and behold, your nag looks good to me," and after haggling after his kind over the price paid him $5,000 and carried away the horse. But before the stranger got fairly away from Hindermeyer he had partially recovered from an acute attack of heart failure he ventured to ask of him his name. He replied, "I have got the horse and you have the money," and he straightway "skiddooed." Hindermeyer believed the new owner of the horse was going to "ring" him, but it turned out that John A. Crabtree was his owner. The rest the world knows. And this is a romance of a horse.

To instruct Jap soldiers in boxing, Jack McFadden, lightweight champion pugilist of Hawaii, has been engaged by the Japanese government to go to Japan as instructor in boxing. The consul says while Jiu Jitsu is well understood in the Japanese army, boxing is not overlooked. The government has decided that boxing offers a system of physical exercise of the greatest value to soldiers.

Jack Didn't Get Enough. Jack Dougherty, the Milwaukee welterweight, wants to meet Joe Walcott again. For Dougherty says it was a lucky punch that beat him when they fought at Chelsea, Mass.

H. B. Irving Makes His Debut Here

First American Appearance of Sir Henry's Son a Success.

"Paolo and Francesca" the Vehicle—New Anglin-Miller Play.

(From Our New York Dramatic Correspondent.)

H. B. IRVING.

H. B. Irving, son of the late Sir Henry Irving, has appeared at the New Amsterdam theater in the Stephen Phillips version of the famous tragedy of "Paolo and Francesca." Mr. Irving was effectively but not notably supported by his wife, Dorothea Baird, in the leading feminine role of Francesca.

In face not unlike the late Sir Henry in this mask of the grim, gaunt tyrant of Rimini and with a voice and utterance that occasionally recall his father, H. B. Irving is able to stand on his own achievement. And if his playing of Malatesta may be taken as a sign he is an actor of uncommon intelligence, with a gift for colorful interpretation in character to which voice and face and plastic grace of pose contribute each a share.

It would be difficult to imagine a more touching picture than this Malatesta when, his hand stained with the blood of the lovers, he staggers from the curtains, sickened and feeling at the horror of his vengeance. The note of triumph at the completion of his task, with the succeeding intoxication of heart and brain as he summons the courtiers to the new betrothal of blood, and the concluding passage of soul racking pity as he gazes on the pair "like children fast asleep" Mr. Irving touches with an insistent demand upon the sympathy of his hearers.

E. Harecourt Williams' Paolo somehow fails at the outset to satisfy the eye, he is such a sleepy, rosy, round faced lover.

Miss Maud Milton's Lucretia has the gait and stride of the old time tragedy queen. But in the scene with Francesca just prior to the end, when the woman's heart is melted in the quick warm blood of a new affection, Miss Milton played excellently, winning one of the evening's spontaneous bursts of applause.

Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller are playing at the Princess in "The Great Divide," which makes a strong impression in Washington, Pittsburgh and other cities early in the season. "The Great Divide" has been called a "transcontinental play." It begins in Arizona, and ends in Massachusetts. It is at once a "call of the wild" and an exposition of the power of centuries of civilization in environment. Its romance is that of a primitive man and a Puritan woman. Thus the play presents a struggle in which love is arbiter between the pride of old New England and the freedom and impetuosity of the new southwest—Priscilla, the pilgrim maiden, carried off by a young Lochlann from out of the west.

Miss Anglin plays Ruth Jordan, a girl raised in Milford Corners, Mass., a community where prudery reigns supreme, who, with her brother, her sister-in-law and two other friends, finds herself transplanted by circumstances to a "cactus farm" in Arizona near the Mexican border. There, through a series of amazing but logical events, she comes face to face with the man who is to be her master. After other events equally as astonishing as those that bring them together she becomes his wife.

Big Loss For Gans. Joe Gans has been offered $1500 a week for four weeks by a Chicago theatrical agency. As the colored boxer's hand is broken, he will have to decline it.

The Attila McGovern Near Fight. The proposed match between Abe Attell and "Terry" McGovern, both through the representatives of the fight crowd, did not agree on the weight question.

Lady Pearlina C. Lady Pearlina C., almost an own sister of Lady Pauline C., 2:11½, now carries a record of 2:15½.

Two New Plays That Succeed

"The Stolen Story," a Drama of New York Newspaper Life.

"The Genius," Restores Nat Goodwin to Favor Once More—A Farce.

(From Our New York Dramatic Correspondent.)

"The Stolen Story," at the Garden theater is a hit. The dramatization by Jesse Lynch Williams of his story of newspaper life in New York has been well received and is a welcome contribution to the metropolitan boards.

The attractiveness of the play lies in its bustle, its vim, its restless energy—in short, its Americanism. Its weaknesses are mainly structural and not serious enough to overwhelm the genuinely dramatic situations that must have been evolved from so stirring a story.

In so far as the play aims to depict newspaper life it is accurate enough to deceive the general public and to please the initiated. The editorial room and the details connected with the work of getting out a newspaper were much nearer the truth than the stage usually gets, and the atmosphere was preserved throughout. Dramatic license excused minor shortcomings.

The situation in the final act where Billy Woods, the star reporter, absent-mindedly dashes into the office from which he has just been discharged and turns out the "beat" of the year, writing against time to accomplish it, is as tense as that of a melodramatic hero strapped to the track with a fast express bearing down upon him.

The situation is plausible. Indeed, it has happened and the half-frenzied manner in which Woods dashes off page after page of "copy" with the moment of going to press right at hand is the very essence of newspaper life.

Jameson Lee Finney gave a well sustained, easy portrayal of Woods. He looked the part of the newspaper genius always on the job and in his final burst of speed in the last act was splendid.

One of the scenes and a most effective one showed the corridor back of the horseshoe in the Metropolitan Opera House. Woods and the other reporters assemble here in an attempt to interview General Cunningham, and Woods finally gets the original draft of an all important legislative bill by snatching it from Cunningham's daughter Frances (played by Dorothy Tennant), with whom he is desperately in love.

The good work of Mr. Finney, Miss Tennant and Beverly Sittgreaves is an attractive feature. Edwin Holt as the city editor and Augustin Daly Wilks as an office boy also score.

Nat Goodwin was cordially welcomed a few nights ago at the Bijou theater, where he appeared in a farcical play called "The Genius," made by W. C. De Mille and Cecil De Mille, impersonating a genial humping maner Jack Spencer.

The scheme of the play is extravagant, but the mechanism of it is neat, and the spirit of it is droll. Spencer is a suitor for a young woman who is fond of the fine arts, and in order to commend himself to her favor he pretends to be a painter, a sculptor and a composer, employing artists to provide works that he assures her are of his own fabrication.

Betrothal ensues, but the "genius" presently finds himself enamored of another girl, an artist's model, and then it becomes essential to his comfort that he should escape from his engagement without confessing his imposture. Difficulties arise, and he is comically perplexed, but eventually he extricates himself from the embarrassing dilemma.

The incidents are obviously incredible, but farce has the privilege of latitude, and the incidents are comic.

Mr. Goodwin's admirable preservation of gravity in the character of an artistic fraud, combined with his glib mendacity and blandly ingenious demeanor, invests his performance with a delightful allurements of mirth. ROBERT BUTLER.

Career of Mordecai Brown

Sensational Three Fingers Pitcher of the Chicago National Champions.

He Practically Won Pennant For His Team—Once a Miner.

Mordecai Brown, the greatest on this season's form of all the Chicago National league club's pitchers, has practically won the flag for the Cubs by his matchless work. His latest achievement was to take two of the games won by Chicago from New York in a recent series.

Brown's performance in each game was of the pluckiest and steadiest kind. "Three Fingers" Brown is one of the real marvels of the profession. He lost the forefinger and half of the next finger on his right hand, pitching hard early in life. Yet he has overcome his heavy handicap and twists superbly with half of a hand that is left to him.

His control is splendid, and he has wonderful curves, which seem beyond all understanding when his disabilities are considered.

Brown is twenty-eight years old, and has lived nearly all his life in Terre Haute, Ind. He used to be a coal miner around Terre Haute and learned to play ball with teams of the neighborhood. In 1901 he got his first professional job with the Terre Haute team. In 1902 he was with Omaha in the Western league.

The St. Louis Nationals took him in 1903. The next year Chicago traded

MORDECAI ("THREE FINGERS") BROWN.

Pitcher Jack Taylor and Catcher McLean for Brown and Mike O'Neil, and such are the changes of fortune in baseball. Chicago has both Brown and Taylor now. Brown did fairly well in 1904 and was very unlucky in 1905, losing nine successive games by one run.

This year things have broken right for him, and his career has been wonderful. Brown is of medium size, pleasant of face and extremely gentlemanly in his ways. He is married and a model citizen. The Chicago players think the world of him, and the fans of that city believe him the greatest pitcher in the game.

Manager Hanlon of the Cincinnati Reds pays the Chicago Nationals this tribute: "A manager who has his men working for him the way the Cubs work for Frank Chance is sure to be successful. I've seen many championship teams and have encountered many managers in my day, but I have never seen a combination that works better than the present Chicago aggregation."

"A team of that kind deserves to win championships, and there is nothing that can prevent them doing it." Take the Chicago team from end to end, and it is plain to see why they have done so well in an artistic way. They have an advantage over any other team in the National league in a number of respects, with Chance himself as about 30 per cent of the total strength of the mechanical part of the aggregation and the greater per cent of the organization strength.

"He is undoubtedly the greatest first baseman in the major leagues today, and he does not allow his managerial cares to interfere with his mechanical work. Why? Because he has his men working in such a way that he need not worry about them, and naturally the best results follow."

The Day of the South Paw. The trend of the times is toward left handers in baseball. The young players, to a greater extent than ever, are being trained to bat left handed. What does it mean? Simply that the south paw pitchers are the ones who are winning and who are going to win.

Jimmy Collins' Song. Jimmy Collins has learned to whistle "It's not what you used to be, it's what you are today," since the Boston management suspended him.

Situation Wanted. Pitcher Frank Donohue has the managerial bee-buzzing in his bonnet, and he is anxious to get a trial with some club as a leader.

Football Standards Changed

Usual Lines of Judgment as to Players Not Dependable.

Light Fast Men More Important—Yale, Pennsylvania, Harvard.

It must be borne in mind in reviewing material for this fall's football campaign that the usual standards of judgment are not necessarily dependable. The active, heavy men will no doubt play as prominent a part as ever in the makeup of any team, but certainly if the new rules operate as the legislators expect them to operate there will be many of the lighter, speedy men who will find a place where they would have been hopelessly lost sight of, previously. The importance of the quarterback's position is enhanced a hundredfold under the new rule code, and the measure of strength given to a team by a tactician behind it and by an efficient field captain in the game cannot be too much exaggerated.

For this reason Yale will feel sorely the loss of Hutchinson at quarterback. By the same token she will be well supplied with tacticians who can develop new plays. The ingenuity of those at work with Pennsylvania's material on the side lines has been tried and not found wanting, and the part that both Stevenson and Luby played at quarterback insures her of an efficient player in that position, whether the former returns to college or not.

The football enthusiast who has been accustomed to look for some remarkable line plunger to be brought back into the back field to plunge through for consistent gains as the basis of any attack will be at a loss to judge where offensive strength is to come from this year. The value of men like Forbes of Yale, Squires of Harvard, Cooney of Princeton and Lamson of Pennsylvania, who were the backbone of the attacks last fall, is this year decidedly problematical. The efficiency of these men in running with the ball is practically gone, and the substitution of the halfback and fullback in running makes estimates based on the presence of heavy men in the line extremely difficult. A heavy line will no doubt be as effective as ever in defense, and on this assumption Yale and Harvard will be especially well supplied.

Yale has again Forbes, Bigelow, Erwin and Jones of the regular line. She has also some good line substitutes to supply the vacant places. The loss of Shevlin and Tripp will be felt, particularly in view of the general adaptability of the latter.

It is the great wealth of back field material and the adaptability shown by the individual men that impress one with Pennsylvania's possibilities. Folwell, Bemis, Sheble and Green are three such exceptional backs that it is hard to see how Penn can fail to do secured as the head coach for the coming season Bemis Pierce, a Seneca Indian from New York, who is without doubt the best posted Indian on the subject of football.

Coach Pierce, who has distinguished himself by many hard fought battles on the gridiron, has devoted himself for the last four years to training footballists mostly in the western part of the country. This year he will be assisted by Frank Hudson, the famous drop kicker, who will teach the young Indians how to kick during his spare hours. Hudson is cashier at the bank maintained at the Carlisle school.

The captain of the Carlisle team is Albert Ekedine, a remarkably fast runner, even for an aborigine, who played a stellar role on the team last season.

Baseball Notes. No big league first baseman is playing more keenly than Tim Lardner of Brooklyn. The big chap has acquired speed enough to make it profitable for him to mix hits with his long raps, and pitchers are much worried by his persistent tapping.

Carlisle Indian Eleven

New Rules Favor the Fleet Runners of the Aborigine Team.

Bemis Pierce Is Its Coach, With Frank Hudson as Assistant.

Football coaches the country over believe that the Carlisle Indian school (Carlisle, Pa.) football eleven for 1906 will be more benefited than any other team in the country by the new regulations and believe their leaders will guide the Indians' progress in such a way that will set a shining example to the palefaces. Admirers of football everywhere have noted in the past the efforts made by the Carlisle Redskins to relieve football of its brutal features and will have a chance this year to see the great college game played by them in all of its modern perfection.

The most notable characteristics of the redefining team this year will be its lack of avoidpunks and the large number of fast runners who will participate in the game. The Indians will have either as ends or back field players probably four men who can make a hundred yards in ten seconds. During the last spring season nearly all of the Indians who will play on this year's eleven took up track and field work and progressed remarkably as a general thing.

No attempt will be made this year to fatten up the Carlisle warriors to even meet in a measure the probably overwhelming weight of the teams which they will play. It is thought that the new rules will give the Redskins a chance to show his fleetness of foot and remarkable agility.

Once more Superintendent Mercer at Carlisle has returned to his idea of having the eleven coached by a full blooded Indian of intelligence. He has Outfielder Fred Odwell will be a Red Leg once again. President Herrmann has decided not to waive his claim on Odwell and recently notified President Grillo of the Toledo club that his services would be wanted by the Cincinnati club next year.

Outfielder Bates of the Boston Nationals has an unequalled record this season. On two occasions he put the ball over the left field fence in the ninth inning and won the games for Boston with a score of 1 to 0.

Billy Nash, the old Boston star and at one time the premier third baseman in the National league, has become a full fledged Jerseyman, picking out Plainfield for his home. Nash is now engaged as traveling salesman for a Perth Amboy (N. J.) wholesale tobacco firm.

It was characteristic of her that at that moment she sincerely knew the weight of her own remorse. "It said lightly on her shoulders then, and it was only later on, when her beauty began to fade, when years came and brought no joy for the middle-aged unmarried woman, that she began to realize what it was that she had to carry through life with her. At that moment a thousand other thoughts filled her mind, such thoughts as one would expect to find there. How was this world to be divided? The guests would have to be put off, the wedding countermanded, the presents returned. And the world—her world—would laugh in its sleeve. There lay the sting.

"Where are you going?" asked Meredith again.

"Home."

"They walked on a few paces together.

"May I come with you?" asked Meredith again.

"Certainly, I have a good deal to tell you."

They called a cab and, singularly enough, they drove all the way to Russell square without speaking. "These two men had worked together for many months, and men who have in daily task in common usually learn to perform it without much interchange of observation. When one man gets to know the mind of another, conversation assumes a place of secondary importance. These two had been through more incidents together than usually fall to the lot of man; each knew how the other would act and think under given circumstances; each knew what the other was thinking now."

The house in Russell square, the quiet house in the corner where the cabs do not pass, was lighted up, and as the cab reached it, the old butler held open the door with a smile of welcome and a faint aroma of whiskey. The luggage had been discreetly removed. Joseph had gone to Mr. Meredith's chambers. Guy Oswald led the way to the smoking room at the back of the house—the room wherein the eccentric Oswald had written his great history—the room in which Victor Durnovo had first suggested the simiacue scheme to the historian's son.

The two survivors of the originating trip passed into this room together and closed the door behind them.

"The worst of one's own private tragedies is that they are usually only comedies in disguise," said Jack Meredith, looking at the other.

Guy Oswald grinned. He was looking at his pipe.

"If we heard this of any two fellows except ourselves we should think it an excellent joke," went on Meredith.

Oscar nodded. He lit his pipe, and still he said nothing.

"Hang it," exclaimed Jack Meredith, suddenly throwing himself back in his chair. "It is a good joke!"

He laughed softly, and all the while his eyes, watchful, wise, anxious, were studying Guy Oswald's face.

"He is harder bit than I am," he was reflecting. "Poor old Oswald!"

The habit of self-suppression was so strong upon him, acquired as a more social duty—that it was only natural for him to think less of himself than of the expediency of the moment. The social discipline is as powerful an agent as that military discipline that makes a man throw away his own life for the good of the many.

Oscar laughed, too, in a strangely staccato manner.

"It is rather a sudden change," observed Meredith, "and all brought about by your coming into that room at that particular moment by accident."

"Not by accident," corrected Oscar, speaking at last. "I was brought there and pushed into the room."

"By whom?"

"By your father."

Jack Meredith sat upright. He drew his curved hand slowly down over his face—keen and delicate as was his mind—his eyes deep with thought.

"The guy now," he said slowly. "The guy now!"

He reflected for some seconds.

"Tell me how he did it," he said curiously.

Oscar told him, rather incoherently, between the puffs. He did not attempt to make a story of it, but merely related the facts as they had happened to him. It is probable that to him the act was veiled which Jack saw quite distinctly.

"That is the sort of thing," was Meredith's comment when the story was finished, "that takes the conceit out of a fellow. I suppose I have more than my share. I suppose it is good for me to find that I am not so clever as I thought I was—that there are plenty of cleverer fellows about, and that one of them is an old man or seventy-nine. The worst of it is that he was right all along. He saw clearly where you and I were—damnable blind."

He rubbed his slim brown hands together and looked across at his companion with a smile wherein the youthful self-confidence was less discernible than of yore. The smile faded as he looked at Oscar. He was thinking that he looked older and graver—more of a middle-aged man who has left something behind him in life—and the sights reminded him of the few gray hairs that were above his own temples.

"Come," he said more cheerfully, "tell me your news. Let us change the subject. Let us throw aside light dalliance and return to questions of money. More important—much more satisfactory. I suppose you have left Durnovo in charge? Has Joseph come home with you?"

"Yes, Joseph has come home with me. Durnovo is dead."

"Dead!"

Guy Oswald took his pipe from his lips.

"He died at Masala of the sleeping sickness. He was a bigger blackguard than we thought. He was a slave dealer and a slave owner. Those forty men we picked up at Masala were slaves belonging to him."

"Ach!" It was a strange exclamation, as if he had burned his fingers. "Who knows of this?" he asked immediately. The expediency of the moment had presented itself to his mind again.

"Only ourselves," returned Oscar. "To Joseph and I."

"That is all right, and the sooner we forget that the better. It would be a dangerous story to tell."

"So I concluded," said Oscar in his slow, thoughtful way. "Joseph swears he won't breathe a word of it."

Jack Meredith nodded. He looked rather pale beneath the light of the gas. "Joseph is all right," he said. "Go on."

"It was Joseph who found it out," continued Oscar, "up at the plateau. I paraded the whole crowd, told them what I had found out, and checked up the whole concern in your name and mine. Next morning I abandoned the plateau, with such men as cared to come. Nearly half of them stayed with Durnovo. I thought it was in order that they might share in the simiacue."

"I told them they could have the whole compound lot of the stuff. But it was not that. They tricked Durnovo there. They wanted to get him to themselves. In going down the river we had an accident with two of the boats, which necessitated staying at Masala. While we were waiting there one night after 10 o'clock the poor devil came alone in a canoe. They had simply cut him in slices. A most beastly sight. I wake up sometimes even now dreaming of it, and I am not a fanciful sort of fellow. Joseph went into his room and was simply sick. I didn't know that you could be made sick by anything you saw. The sleeping sickness was on Durnovo then. He had brought it with him from the plateau. He died before morning."

Oscar ceased speaking and returned to his pipe. Jack Meredith, looking haggard and worn, was leaning back in his chair.

"Poor devil!" he exclaimed. "There was always something tragic about Durnovo. I did hate that man, Oscar! I hated him and all his works."

"Well, he's gone to his account now," said Jack, "but that does not make him any better a man while he was alive. Don't let us cant about him now. The man was an unmitigated scoundrel. Perhaps he deserved all he got."

"Perhaps he did. He was Marie's husband."

"The devil he was!"

Meredith fell into a long reverie. He was thinking of Jocelyn and her dislike for Durnovo, of the scene in the drawing room of the bungalow at Loango; of a thousand incidents all connected with Jocelyn.

"How I hate that man!" he exclaimed at length. "Thank God, he is dead, because I should have killed him."

Guy Oswald looked at him with a slow, pensive wonder. "Perhaps," he knew more than Jack Meredith knew himself of the thoughts that conceived those words, so out of place in that quiet room from those suave and courtly lips.

All the emotions of his life seemed to be concentrated into this one day of Jack Meredith's existence. Oscar's presence was a comfort to him. The presence of a calm, strong man is better than many words.

"So this," he said, "is the end of the simiacue. It did not look like a tragedy when we went into it."

"So far as I am concerned," replied Oscar, with quiet determination, "it certainly is the end of the simiacue. I have had enough of it. I, for one, am not going to look for that plateau again."

"Nor I. I suppose it will be started as a limited liability company by a German in six months. Some of the natives will leave landmarks as they come down so as to find their way back."

Suburban News in Brief

FELLOWS

Fellows, Oct. 11.—Mr. and Mrs. Lew Fellows were given a surprise party Sunday by about fifty of their neighbors and friends walking in upon them with bountiful laden lunch baskets. Very substantial evidence of the esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Fellows are held was left in the shape of silverware. All reports a most enjoyable time.

Mr. and Mrs. Locke Pierce and son were Janesville visitors last Sunday. Arthur Keylock and Jerome Collins attended the Jefferson fair last week.

C. L. Pierce and family resided in Stoughton last Sunday.

Quite a number from here attended the sales in Evansville yesterday.

AVON

Avon, Oct. 10.—Miss Mable Ross is enjoying a month's vacation from school duties.

Mrs. Leroy Stokes has returned from the northern part of the state, where she has been visiting relatives.

Mrs. John Henry has been on the sick list but is better at present.

The R. N. A. social at Avon was well attended last Friday night. A fine program was rendered consisting of songs by the Royal Neighbors and music by A. Gardiner's graphophone. A bountiful supper was served and all present had a delightful time. Several young people from this town attended the Newark dance Tuesday evening. In spite of the snow-storm a large crowd was in attendance and all present had a fine time.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Kinney of Durand and Mr. and Mrs. I. Bryce and daughter Elsie spent Sunday with A. Hurley and family.

Peter Scott of Beloit spent Sunday at H. D. Garde's.

Chester Garde spent Monday in Beloit visiting relatives and friends.

Matt Olsen has had his house reshingled.

Jas. Cox is having his barns painted.

Miss Nettie Lofthus of Brodhead is spending a few days with Miss Clara Rostelgen.

The school in district number three is closed this week on account of sickness.

Chas. Thomas is contemplating moving his family to Durand in a couple of weeks.

The social at the M. E. church was quite well attended last evening. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to music by G. Henry Anderson's graphophone. A good time is reported.
